

The two stations with which I am connected would find it exceptionally cumbersome to comply with the proposed regulation. Compounding the problem even further is that we are licensed as non-commercial broadcast stations with education as our primary intent. The extra cost, without any demonstrated need, would tax our limited resources and the maintenance of this equipment would be a drain upon our limited time and space. Such a requirement might be of consideration as a remedial action should there be demonstrated damages without it. However, under the current environment and in the absence of demonstrated harm, we submit that such a requirement would not be in the public interest, convenience, or necessity.
